The Devil as a Church Architect.

[From the Springfield Republican.]

Not directly and personally of course, but by insinuating himself into architects and building committees. As he walks up and down the earth he must view some things with uncommon satisfaction. When he tempted the Lord in the wilderness, he was answered, "Man lives not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

Having got this information he makes use of it to hinder every word of God from entering into the life of man. If people will go to church and sit down to hear, Satan whispers to the architect to put in pillars to hide the preacher, and then stain the windows to hide him more by the "dim religious light," and then having kept out the pure light of heaven, to distribute the stained light into ghastly blotches, making the bald crown of one deacon a bright purple, and the nose of another to play with a lambent blue, and the face of some devout sister, who is honestly enough as she is, to horrify with a ghastly green—the whole interior reduced to about the aspect of nature at the total eclipse of the sun. Then the old serpent brings it about that the audience-room should be acoustically as bad as possible. He suggests a long and narrow sarcophagus-shaped room with a transept and apse; and a high pointed roof and open rafters, and everything admirably adapted for shivering the words of God into echoes, and for accommodating swallows, if they could have restored their ancient privileges of nest-building in the house of the Lord. As for the preacher, whom the devil hates and would annoy and incommodate as much as possible, he is placed in the alcove, as far back as may be, cut off from magnetic communication with his admirers by a non-conducting empty space, as wide as may be, between him and the front pews, while as to the half of the congregation away down the dim remoteness at the further end of the narrow house, they might almost as well be at Cape Town. Then the adversary suggests, get the singers away from the congregation as far as the real estate of the society will allow, either behind the minister, or lifted up from between heaven and earth in the gallery. If in the latter position, so that the congregation cannot see them, and so that, if artistic and ugly, they can frustrate all congregational singing; or if behind the minister, so that they can pour the confused waves of sound, organ and all, across the back of his defenceless head, submerging all the nerves of his tympanum as with great billows rolling over him, and each particular singer thrusting into his ears from behind at close quarters his jangle of song. Give them, too, whippersaw, the adversary, a small and narrow box in front of the organ, and then you insure a paid quartet, a fixed and staring fact, and to be stared at forever—and you will never get the poor timid girl with a plain bonnet to sit there, nor the modest young man with a very long nose. And so you will have little hope of the grand and sympathetic and united praises of the great congregation welling and surging up lustily from its own midst. Keep out the light, hinder the speaking and hearing and praising, make things unsocial, formal, spectacular, mediæval, finical—let the plain people, who have a good many children and cannot get themselves up in a style becoming the church interior, peep in, perhaps inquire the price of a pew, and go away—all this suits the devil as a church architect. But he never liked the old Puritan meeting-houses, which were nearly square, and had the pulpit on the oblong side, and the deep-surrounding galleries and the people brought up close and within range. Before the Old South of Boston is pulled down let the people go in and take a last scrutinizing look, and then let them go out and speak to the architects and demand more Christian common sense in planning church edifices.—Mr. Hepworth was asked the other day what sort of a church he would like to have built for him. He replied: "You see any street speaker gathering around him a crowd, every individual of which he is bound to reach and influence by his voice—well, I wish that roofed over."

Carosities of the Uxbridge Bank Robbery.

[From the Boston News, July 29.]

On Saturday, Messrs. E. B. Hayward and Jacob Taft, both connected with the Uxbridge Bank, visited the office of the Chief of Police in Boston, and presented a communication having no signature and mailed at New York on the twenty-fifth inst., stating that some articles stolen from the Uxbridge Bank could be found buried in the Back Bay Islands, giving a diagram of the locality. Officers Ham and Wood, of the city police, in company with the gentlemen above named, immediately set out to prospect. Guided by the diagrams they proceeded to the grounds, borrowed tools from some workmen in the neighborhood, and began operations. After a somewhat protracted search a copy of a Boston newspaper was unearthed containing a gold watch, a diamond ring, two plain gold rings, a gold tumbler, a pair of hair bracelets, two gold pencils, two pairs of gold-borrowed spectacles and several other articles, which were keepsakes, the property of little Mabel Taft, left to her by her deceased mother, and which had been placed in the vault of the bank for safe keeping by her grandfather, the cashier. Mr. Hayward expresses great satisfaction at the recovery of the property, and thinks there is truly honor among some thieves, believing as he does that the communication was sent by the burglars in response to his advertisement stating that these articles belonged to an orphan child. The property was unearthed near the junction of Dartmouth and Newbury streets, and but for the fact that a plank, the length and location of which the letter gave, had been removed since the concealment of the property, there would have been no difficulty in going to the exact spot where it was found. The recovery of the above stolen property inspired confidence in the statements of another letter received by the same gentleman by an anonymous source, and, following the directions given in the letter, they went to South Framingham Saturday afternoon, and found a bag containing $50 in five cent nickel coins concealed behind a stone wall near the railroad depot.

BREVITIES.

The Wilmington (N. C.) Star reports a fierce fight between a coach-whip snake and a colored girl. The girl won.

A number of wealthy ladies in Hartford have entered protests against paying taxes without representation.

A young lady of Lee, Mass., has disposed of her hair, which reached to the ground, to a Pittsburg hair dealer for $55.

An exchange gravely tells the world that the reason why Arabella Goldard did not leave a son in a New York dry goods house was, not because she disliked the dry goods business, but because she has no son.

Mrs. Harper, who was lately paroled out of the Connecticut State Prison, refuses to leave it.

A lass who once sang in the cafes with Christina Nilsson is now employed as a domestic in Boston.

John G. Saxe is sacked by the Congress Hall bells, who prefer the tight laced pants of young male firts to the old poet and his jinks.

Watering place hotel clerks cast withering looks of scorn upon any guest who applies for accommodation unless the latter has a diamond pin as big as a muskmelon.

Mrs. Shoddy puckered up her mouth gently and told a gentleman friend that one of her lovely daughters was a "blonde" and the other a "brunette."

At Sandy Creek, a few evenings since, a couple were married. On returning to their boarding-house they found themselves locked out, and so were compelled to occupy a livery stable barn as a "bridal chamber."

An exchange states that a Mrs. Wood, of Millsburg, Ohio, has received $16,000 from school-keepers who sold whiskey to her husband. Now let Mr. Wood drink up the money and then another set of suits for damages would probably foot up to $200,000 or more.

A New Albany hen bravely hoarded her nest of twelve eggs within three feet of the ring in Barnum's circus tent during all the clatter and glitter of the afternoon and evening performances. With feminine instinct she pertinaciously held to her "squalor right," and would not abandon the invaded field.

That was a very touching incident—that of the little school girl who refused to define the word clown as "a low, vulgar fellow," and for her stubbornness was punished with the felle and detained in play hours, all to no reformatory end. The little child's father proved to be a clown in a circus.

A Rochester man returning home late the other night, suddenly ran against a man in the parlor. Supposing him to be a burglar, he gave him a sound thrashing and dragged him to the street to surrender his prisoner to the police. The man, however, turned out to be a sweetheart of the hired girl.

William C. Irving of Troy has a very rare bird. It is set down by natural history as the Pimiliculus, and is supposed to be a hybrid, crossed between an eagle and a duck. Less than half a dozen have been found in the United States, though they are said to be quite common in Mexico. It has the eyes and tail of an eagle and the back and comb of a duck. It measures three feet six and one-half inches from tip of tip of its wings. Mr. Irving secured the prize alive and has it confined in a cage at his house.

A man employed on the Goodrich steamer Alpena, had an exciting struggle with a deer in Muskegon lake, a tributary to Lake Michigan, the other day. He was accidentally thrown overboard when grappling the buck by the horns. He held his head under water until it was drowned. The deer weighed two hundred pounds and struggled fearfully.

At Otago, the other day, John Barrett ascended an apple tree to saw off a limb upon which a swarm of bees had settled. Notwithstanding that he took the precaution to tie a rope around the limb, it being rotten unexpectedly broke, precipitating bees, Barrett and branch to the ground. About one thousand bee stings were removed from Mr. Barrett's face and head, and others yet remain.

The hurly-burly of the Sewing Machine war is end-

all sorts of trickery to trap the unwary, and hun-

The Financial Bagaboo.

In conversation with one of our prominent merchants the other day, he remarked to us that he was for Grant because he would not vote against his business prosperity. By voting for Greeley the merchant said he would be virtually giving help to establish the old order of things as they existed under the rule of the Democrats. He had prospered under Republican rule, and he had not under Democratic; therefore he would not cut his own business throat.

This is not the first time we have heard this brilliant and enterprising fancy advanced. Not long since it was presented to us by another kind-hearted but prejudiced gentleman of this city; and it seemed to him reason enough why he should vote to uphold the present administration, or rather, the President of it.

As in the case of Gen. Grant paying off the national debt, these gentlemen fail to see that the credit is due to the people, and not to any man or particular body of men.—The war, with all its evils, scattered money over the north, enriching many, while the abundance of currency tended to the prosperity of all. Meantime the growth of the nation was great. Emigration was and is pouring its thousands upon our shores, and the resources of the country are rapidly developing.

These are the causes of our national prosperity. If our success is due to any man whatever it is to Ex-Secretary Chase, the father of the green-back, and we believe, of the present national banking system; but Mr. Chase is in favor of Greeley for President. Yet, efficient as Mr. Chase's methods have been, our prosperity is due to the people, who, with industry and intelligence unsurpassed in history, have made this nation the wealthiest and among the foremost on the globe.

It is folly to suppose that under Mr. Greeley the nation would cease to prosper—it is folly to suppose his election would establish the old order of things, save to shelter the people under the constitution from the dangers of centralization. Under his wise guidance we shall go on to a greater and far safer prosperity, for what man is there who has a better knowledge of the needs and resources of the country than he? and whom have we better versed in the science of government and of political economy?

New York City was ruled for years by Tweed, who, we have a right to infer from recent evidence, is now for Grant's re-election. Yet, though Tweed misruled and robbed the city, the people prospered as they never had before, and the bounds of the city enlarged. As well say, therefore, that the growth of New York under Tweed was due to him, as say that the prosperity of the whole country is due to this Administration.

A Question of Etiquette.

We have received a package of papers from Oregon, embracing newspapers from China, Japan and Australia. Novel sensations are created by reading papers from afar, especially those from Japan, which has been sending over here its Ministers and young ladies, Tommy and its agile gymnasts.

It pains us to learn that the Empire is profoundly agitated. What the British Charge d' Affaires wants to know is, whether the Mikado is going to sit or squat in his presence.—He feels so strongly on the subject that he tells whom it may concern that if that Mikado don't learn to stand on his legs, instead of curling them under him, why he wants to go home, so, there, now! How happy we should be that this chap wasn't sent over here during Andy's reign. In a moment of forgetfulness that worthy might have sat on his heels, and then there would have been a row, a roar from the British lion, perhaps a war, and we would have had no opportunity to march up and down the hill with our Alabama claims. But what we were spared has been visited on the Japs.

What is the special point of the Britisher's objection we know not. We should suppose that the Mikado's legs are not as symmetrical as Lydia Thompson's, but one would judge that the English official feels as much curiosity on the subject as a ballet master. He just wanted to see that little Mikado on his pins.

In this way history repeats itself. In Kansas we had a long and fierce fight over squatter sovereignty, and now we find the squating of a sovereign agitating all Japan. One feels proud of the Bird when he thus sees American influence extending. In behalf of the American nation, we beg leave to assure Mr. Mikado he may put his legs in his pocket for aught we care.

"Preaching Politics."

In the FREEMAN of several days since there appeared an editorial in which the preaching of politics by ministers at the present time was deprecated, as calculated to arouse dis-vision in the churches, we taking the ground that as the campaign did not involve moral questions or the safety of the country, the ministers were not justified in preaching such sermons.

The editorial was suggested by the published report of one of Rev. Mr. Newman's sermons in Washington, whose remarks, if correctly reported, were exactly calculated for the stump and not for the pulpit. Some wise-acres, however, have seen fit to say that it was in reality a criticism of a sermon by Rev. J. Y. Bates, a Pastor of one of our city churches. Two facts militate against the assertion—the article was written by a gentleman who hadn't the least idea that Mr. B. had preached a sermon at all, and second, the sermon in question was in direct accord with the sentiments of our editorial.

Our recollection of the sermon is that it was the best sermon preached during the Reverend gentleman's Rondout pastorate. Its main idea inculcated the sweetest and broadest charity, and it was especially forceful in proclaiming freedom of opinion and the duty of being mutually respectful of each other's rights to individual sentiments. In harmony with our editorial it pointed out the danger of discord in the church that might arise should the opposite idea prevail. And in enforcement of this idea it strongly advanced the inspiring truth that above all political struggles or ideas stands the glorious aim and future of the Christian. We think if many more such sermons were preached the community would be far more peaceful in political times, and many men would obtain a clearer idea of their rights and duties regarding other people's opinions. We hope to hear that a sermon of similar scope and idea has been preached in every pulpit in the city and the whole land.

POLITICAL NOTES.

Sixty clerks are employed in the Department mailing documents for Grant.

The Swedes of Illinois are for Greeley. So says the Swedish paper of the state.

Gen. Dix is preparing his quadrennial letter for 1877, explaining why he can't go for some more.

Garret Smith thinks the Ku-Klux, confined in the penitentiary are suffering punishment not warranted by their acts.

The state of New York this year elects a Congressmen-at-large, a novel office in its political history. The World nominates Sunset Cox.

Benjamin G. Harris, of Maryland, who was censured for disloyalty, is for Grant. Either the Grant papers or Mr. Harris has made a mistake, for according to them all the secessionists were to go for Greeley.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The 2nd suits are already leaving Prussia in large numbers, and are settling in Prague.

The Milwaukee Board of Trade is trying to stop all stock and grain gambling. They will have a big fight.

A justice of the peace in Otsego county has fined himself $25 for drunkenness. He will do for Barnum's show.

Marshall Bazaine's trial bid fair to be a case relucte, as 200 witnesses have been summoned and 3,000 documents are to be produced.

At a grand ball at the Mansion House, Long Beach, on Saturday last, Attorney J. D. Banghart met the widow Marsh, proposed marriage the next morning in the sun and was married the same day. He should be called Banghart.

Like Willie, a blind man living at Trenton, N. J., got angry at his wife on the 5th inst., and left home. She followed him to a bridge where they had a scuffle, when he cut one of her arteries and she bled to death. He was arrested.

The crew of the ship Josephine Cutler found the dead carcass of a whale off Cape Clear, on the 15th of June last, from which they obtained blubber enough for 4,000 gallons of oil.—The ambergris was neglected and sank, much to the disgust of the sailors, as it is very valuable.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

The Sun says if Barnard is impeached Judge Peckham will have to be.

Isaac Simmonds is serving out a sentence in a South Carolina jail, and at the same time acting as turnkey. They mean he shall pay his passage.

The British aristocracy have introduced into England a game called "Polo" which is similar to a boys' play named hockey, in which a ball is knocked about with a curved club. Polo is played on horse-back and gives the young lords great amusement.

Michigan has very wisely passed a law making it a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine and imprisonment, to aim a firearm at any person, whether it be loaded or not, and if harm comes of such an act, the perpetrator is responsible criminally and pecuniarily. This will prove to be a very salutary statute. Enough people have been killed by the sportive handling of guns and pistols, and it is time the practice was made a crime.

An example of precautionary justice furnished by the English Courts is worthy of imitation here. A collier, employed at the Silkestone colliery, for having taken a naked lamp into the mine, was sentenced to two months in prison. He endangered the lives of four hundred workmen by his careless neglect. A few such penalties would exert a good influence, and perhaps prevent "another disaster" paragraph in the telegraph news.

James Fisk, Sr., if he lives long enough, bids fair to obtain as wide a notoriety as that once enjoyed by his deceased son. One day or two since he met Gen. J. W. Phelps at a hotel in Brattleboro, when he stepped up behind him, and without warning, proceeded to give him a sound castigation with a whip. After Phelps had been punished pretty severely, the parties were separated. Fisk, it appears, as a little crazy, and he imagined Phelps had insulted him in some way.

A CHIEF NEIGHBOR FOR YOUNG WIDOWS.—A friend in the country has an observatory on the top of his fine, elevated mansion, in which he has placed a telescope of power enough to command a very extended view, and here in this perch after dinner he smokes his cigar and enjoys the panorama. Some time since he thoughtfully directed the telescope toward the house of a delightful young widow, living some miles away in the valley below, and was pleased to see her sitting on her doorstep seemingly unemployed. Taking out his watch, he was about to take a mental memorandum of what he saw and tell her of it when they met next, but the pleasant picture was so changed in a moment that he concluded to say nothing about it for the present. Another friend, of the sterner sex, just then drove up, jumped from his carriage, threw his arms around her, and they were parted. The engagement was not long after announced. The chief neighbor is commendable in telegraphic neighbors.

BUFFALO RACES.—THE FOUR GREAT-EST TROTTERS IN THE WORLD.

BUFFALO, Aug. 9.
One thousand five hundred persons assembled to witness the four greatest trotters in the world. Goldsmith Maid, American Girl, Lucy and Henry contested for prizes in the same field.

Ten horses were entered for the first race, but only six started. Clara G., Susie North Star and Membrino having been drawn. Rosalind ruptured a blood vessel while scoring and was also withdrawn. Lulu won the pole. James H. Burke obtained the lead at the start and kept it to the quarter pole, with a wide gap between him and Judge Fullerton. Fullerton hauled ahead on the home stretch and won the heat by a length, Lulu second, and Derby third. At the three-quarter pole Burke dropped dead from acute inflammation of the heart. He was owned by C. K. Teakle of New York, and was purchased in March for $12,000.

In the 2nd heat Triumph was drawn. Fullerton took the lead and maintained it round the entire track, winning the heat. Derby 2nd, and Nonesuch 3rd. Lulu just saving her distance. In the third heat Lulu pocketed Fullerton on the start, keeping the lead by two lengths until near the three-quarter pole, when Fullerton shot ahead, winning the heat by two lengths, and the race in three straight heats.

The great race of the day, free for all, was called at 4:10. Goldsmith Maid sold on pools at 100 to 25 against the field. Before reaching the first turn the Maid slipped, and the American Girl shot ahead and kept the lead to the half point, when she was overhauled by Lucy, who won the heat by a length, the Maid second and the Girl third. In the second heat the Maid again led, but broke badly. The American Girl got the advantage and kept the same, being present in the home stretch by Lucy and Goldsmith Maid, and coming in by half a head, winning the heat in 2:17 1/4. The third heat was won by Lucy. On the 4th heat Henry led closely, followed by the other three, to the quarter, when a hot contest occurred between the Girl, Maid, and Lucy to the home stretch, when the Girl slipped and Lucy and Maid shot a length ahead, Lucy winning the heat by a head, the Maid second, Girl third, and Henry fourth. Time 2:18 1/4. 2:17 1/4 2:19 3/4. 2:22. Before closing the night announced that the owner of James H. Burke would have his entrance fee returned.

DESTRUCTIVE THUNDER STORM.

QUEBEC, Aug. 9.
During a heavy thunder storm last night a schooner was struck by lightning and damaged, the Church St. Michael was struck and burned to the ground, and the steamship Vicksburg from London went ashore on Quebec Island.

SENATOR SUMNER SERENADED BY COLORED MEN.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.
Senator Sumner was serenaded to-night by Dr. Augusta Williams, A. Wormly and other colored citizens. A number of white persons were also present. In response to repeated calls Senator Sumner appeared at the door of his residence and was greeted with great applause. Dr. Augusta introduced him as "America's greatest Statesman, and life long and firm friend of the African race."

Senator Sumner then addressed them in a lengthy and forcible speech in which he said: "I am touched by this voluntary expression of friendship, and beg to thank you from my heart in seeing you on this occasion. I think of you only as personal friends among whom I have labored more than 20 years.—During this considerable period changes have occurred of incalculable importance to the country, but especially to the colored people. When I entered upon my public duties here, slavery was in the ascendant, giving law to all the usages of life. The colored man if not a slave was degraded, was not allowed to testify in any of the Courts, he was shut out from public schools, he was excluded from public conveyances and thrust away from the ballot box; but here in the National Capital all these terrible wrongs have ceased. The court room, school house, horse car and ballot box are all open, never to be closed. Revolutions do not go backward, therefore you may rest secure in what has been won. Of this be sure: Slavery will never be revived, nor will you be restricted or limited in any of these rights you now enjoy. (Applause and three cheers for Sumner.) Most sincerely do I congratulate you on these signal triumphs so little to be expected when I first became acquainted with you. When we consider the brief period in which they have been accomplished, I am sure you will unite with me in hope and trust for the future. (Cheers of we will.) It is my duty to remind you that the work is not yet completed. This will be only by the enactment of a civil rights bill which shall relieve a citizen whoever he may be, from any exclusion or discrimination on account of his color. Only when we shall be established that equality before the law to which now for the first time in our history, all political parties are distinctly pledged. Here there can be no question. (Applause.) It is in the platforms of all, for anarchy passage of such a law. I do not doubt then that you will have all the assurance of rights that can be found in the constitution and the law, but that law will be the law of the land. (Applause.) I shall not disguise from you that something more will be needed. There must be a constant watchful public opinion behind to see that these are enforced, letter and in spirit."

Mr. Sumner then advised the colored citizens to insist upon their rights, always by petition, by speech and by vote, and never to sustain any man by their votes who were not true to them, and who opposed measures intended for their benefit. After explaining to them their situation before the country, he closed by saying, "Please accept these few words as my acknowledgment of your kindness this evening. (Cries of go on.) From long acquaintance you know something of my sympathies. (A voice—'I do.') Always from the beginning I have sought to serve you, and always to the end I shall seek to serve you. To your cause my life is dedicated, and nothing can turn me from it; nothing can tempt or drive me from its support."

The Senator then retired. The crowd applauded, the band played several airs, and numbers of white and colored persons entered the house to shake hands with Mr. Sumner.
